HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, June 26.—The Red Sox wanted to slam the Senators in the worst way as a parting shot and moved against the tail-enders with the grim determination to make the visitors bite the trail with only one game out of the series to their credit. The Senators, and specially Joe Cantillon, were boiling over with soreness for losing two extra inning games with the Red Sox, and nothing will spare a crowd of ball tossers more than to be beaten when their chances look just as good.

The losses only put the Potomac lads in a savage mood to get the last game, and thereby break on in the quartet of scrappiests which are being concluded.

The home team was the favorite with the talent pickers on account of their rattling finishes exhibited in the games which were most bitterly fought, and they still had confidence in them to come to the scratch and repeat when taking the train over to New York for the Highlanders to-morrow.

Cantillon appears to have the best of the pitching argument, as he held Tom Hughes in reserve, besides having Burns and Falkenburg to fall back on, while McGinley had to depend on some of his second-string twirlers.

KNIFE CLEW TO SLAYER OF MULLINS GIRL

The stained and rusted knife which was found near Squire's Field, Arlington, where pretty Annie Mullins, the handsome Cambridge maid, was murdered, is held at the Arlington police station for submission to Professor Whitney to-day for blood tests.

The finding of the knife and its fragmentary handle by Thomas E. Galvin of No. 111 Dudley street, North Cambridge, gave the police of Arlington and Cambridge additional incentive for harder work than ever to find some clew that will fix the responsibility for the murder of Annie Mullins, who was slain so mysteriously on March 27 last.

"I am not prepared to say whether or not in my opinion this dirk was the one used in the killing of Annie Mullins," said Inspector Hooley.

"I prefer to suspend judgment in the matter until after Professor Whitney of Harvard makes a chemical examination of the stains.

"The knife was found about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Thomas F. Galvin, a clerk employed in a drug store at Massachusetts avenue and Rice street, Cambridge.

"Mr. Galvin found the knife near a street directly opposite the little church on Marathon Field and not a great distance from where the body of Annie Mullins was discovered. It was along the natural route any person would have taken in going from where the murder was done to the tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

RUNNING DOWN NEW CLEW.

To-day Chief Urquhart and Inspector Hooley of Arlington were early at work on the case. In fact, Chief Urquhart and Inspectors Hooley and Burley have never ceased their efforts to unravel the mystery surrounding the brutal murder of the girl who was lured away from the home of Professor von Jagemann and slain.

For some weeks little has been said about the case. The police officials preferred to have the matter drop so far as public interest is concerned.

To-day at Arlington police headquarters, while efforts were made to minimize the importance of the find, it was admitted that Chief Urquhart and Inspector Hooley were working on the case.

The knife is still at police headquarters and will be kept there until Chief Urquhart decides when it shall be taken to Professor Whitney for chemical analysis of the mysterious stains, which plainly discolor the blade in a different manner than the ordinary rust caused by long exposure to the air.

In the meantime Chief Urquhart and Inspector Hooley are absent from headquarters on a mysterious quest. Where the officials were and why they were away from the station, the officer in charge professed to state. All he would say was, "I don't know."

ON TRACK OF SLAYER.

He admitted that the Arlington police are still working on the case and that they had never for a moment given over the idea that their labor to find the murderer of Annie Mullins, and to fix the crime on him, would eventually prove successful.

While the inquest held at the instigation of District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex County ended apparently without anything conclusive being determined, the Arlington police and Inspector Hurley continued their efforts.

Delegates to Great Boston Convention Injured in Collapse of Vehicle at Newport Today.

NEWPORT, June 26.—Seven women delegates to the Boston convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs were badly injured in the collapse of an omnibus in which a large party of the women were being taken to Easton's Beach for a shore dinner this afternoon.

Going down the steep Bath road one of the rear wheels on the big wagon broke, and the conveyance overturned.

The horses started to run away, but were caught. All the occupants were thrown to the ground and several of them were buried under the wreck.

Seven were badly hurt. They sustained broken arms and legs and bruised faces. The driver was hurled from his seat and fell fifty feet away. It was a miracle that no one was killed.

Among those seriously injured were Mrs. Davenport, wife of Mr. Davenport, of Rotterdam, N. Y., and Mrs. Hayes of Oregon.

As soon as the injured women could be reached after the omnibus was righted by the drivers and the horsemen they were rushed to the Newport hospital.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, June 26.—It was the final appearance of the Boston Doves on Manhattan Island and the first in the series where a single game was on tap. Both teams welcomed the fact that the three days of double-headers were over, and the nine innings seemed like an easy jog for the wearied diamond hustlers. The Giants had strung up four out of the five competitions, and it was up to the Doves to capture the final test.

The game was pushed along fast, as the Doves were anxious to catch the host back to the Hub, as they saw a chance of making up a Nit back on the native heath.

The Doves have made a good impression, and there has been plenty of all kinds of fighting in the contests, which added zest to the sport and showed the McGraw spirit which exists among the old Giants on the Boston nine, as they refused to let their old sobriquet get away with anything more than was earned.

Kelley was tempted to call out his stellar artist of the curves, Pat Flaherty, for a second shy at the Giants, as he hung collars on their nobs the first game he officiated against him.

SHOT FOR YORK BRIDGE OPENER

YORK, Me., June 26.—Two or more unknown people attempted to open the draw in the new bridge which is causing so much trouble for the town and to which the War Department has become interested.

To-day they had succeeded in opening it partially when they were chased by an officer and one or two citizens, the officer firing one shot from his revolver without effect.

The officer and citizens replaced the draw in its proper position to avoid accidents.

BOY ROBBER SENTENCED.

Daniel Schlagel, seventeen, of Hudson street, South End, one of the five young men who attacked and robbed E. J. Blundell, a cab driver, at Irvine Beach on the night of June 12, was to-day sentenced to a term at the Concord Reformatory by Judge Cutler, in the Chelsea Police Court. He appealed and was held in $1,000.

RICHMOND VOTES LOST IN ELECTION RECOUNT

VOTE IN M'CLELLAN-HEARST CONTEST MISSING WHEN CALLED FOR BY COURT.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The envelopes containing the void and protested ballots of Richmond borough have disappeared. This was the admission made to Supreme Court Justice Lambert in the majority report to-day by County Clerk Bostwick of Richmond.

Mr. Bostwick had been ordered to produce the envelopes yesterday, but failed to appear. When at the opening of the court to-day, Mr. Bostwick was introduced to Justice Lambert by President John T. Dooling of the Board of Elections, the jurist said serenely:

"You should have presented yourself yesterday. Had you been properly subpoenaed, I would have taken strict measures."

It was at this point that the county clerk said that his failure to appear was due to his inability to find the required envelopes.

"Why, here's that!" asked Justice Lambert in evident amazement.

"I can't account for it," stammered Bostwick. "We have the envelopes for the 1905, 1904, 1906 and 1907 elections, but not a trace of those of 1905."

At the suggestion of Clarence J. Shearn and Charles A. Dodson, special counsel for Attorney-General Jackson, Mr. Bostwick was allowed until Monday to continue his search for the missing envelopes.

PLUNGED TO DEATH TRYING TO GAIN SIGHT

NEW YORK, June 26.—Mrs. Dora Senoll, a woman of eighty-one, who had read that the morning sun would cure blindness, went to the roof of her home at No. 224 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street to-day, hoping to benefit her fast failing sight. Unable to see the edge of the cornice, she walked off into space, falling five stories to the pavement below. The woman was instantly killed.

OVERCOME BY HEAT, YOUNG WOMAN DYING

The young woman who last night was overcome by the heat at the Dudley street terminus of the elevated railroad, and was taken in an unconscious condition to the City Hospital, is dying, the doctors say. She recovered consciousness long enough to say that her name was Mary Finney, and that her home was on Shawmut avenue.

CLUBMAN SCHENCK DIES AT HOTEL

LAKEVILLE, Ct., June 26.—Following an attack of heart failure, which had lasted several hours, Spottiswood D. Schenck, a well-known New York clubman, was found dead in bed in his room at the Monoosco Hotel here to-day. He was the son of the Rev. Mr. Schenck of Brooklyn. A daughter is Mrs. Natalie Schenck-Collins of New York, one of the leaders of metropolitan society.

BOY KILLED IN QUARRY

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 26.—Frank Adams, the four-year-old son of Harold S. Adams, clerk in the R. G. Dun & Company Commercial Agency here, was killed by a fall into an old lime quarry near his father's home, three miles from the city. The boy was playing near the edge of the quarry and slipping on a stone, fell over the cliff about fifty feet to the bottom, where he was found wedged between two boulders.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Walter Sinclair, a young business man from Cleveland, met Madame Alvarez, a beautiful and mysterious woman, in Boston. He found that she was living in close proximity to a very unpleasant open ditch in which she had lost a ring. They hired a hot car and an expert chauffeur and went about the city. They found themselves pursued by three men, and a woman in a green car.

The green car chased by and the women in it shouted something in a tongue that Sinclair did not understand. Then Madame Alvarez took a dreadful fall, and Sinclair, thinking she had something from it. A tough looking man, creeping out of the darkness, approached her with a knife and a revolver. When the man saw who the woman was he fell on his knees and kissed the hem of her dress.

CHAPTER VII.

AFTER this remarkable scene Madame Alvarez regained with attitude unchanged gazing after the men who fled as if their lives were at stake. When they had passed out of sight she returned to where Sinclair stood almost speechless with amazement at what he had seen. What manner of woman was this at whose command armed ruffians threw down their weapons, begged for forgiveness and took to their heels?

His knowledge of criminals was limited to an acquaintance with "Sherlock Holmes," one term in office as a jury and a grand larceny case and an occasional reading of the stories of some great mind over mystery in the newspapers. It included nothing which in any way explained what he had just seen with his own eyes.

Although she must have noted the astonishment which was written all over his countenance, Madame Alvarez did not smile, nor did she offer any adequate explanation of the amazing mixture by which she had escaped from what looked like certain death. Her face wore an expression new to Sinclair—that of sympathy—and when she spoke he understood that she grieved for the ruffian who had come so near shooting her down.

"Poor fellow!" she said. "How he has been deceived! He came here to kill me—for you whom he would have willingly given his life. As soon as he recognized me I knew he would not shoot, for he knows that I am not his enemy, but his best friend."

All this left Sinclair more in the dark than ever. He could hardly believe his senses. In some old mediæval story such a scene as he had witnessed might have been possible, but in Boston, in the twentieth century, it was incredible. It removed not one iota of his suspicions as to the character of this woman, but as always it left him unable to refrain from admiring the superb way in which she surmounted difficulties and came unscathed through every crisis.

He could think of nothing opportune to say. Even congratulations on her narrow escape would not belittling such a woman. So he walked in silence for her to resume the conversation which had been interrupted by the appearance of the would-be assassin.

A Sacred Trust

"Mr. Sinclair," she began, picking up the black wrapped package which she had dropped at his feet, "in your care I am going to entrust the little packet which I handed you a moment ago. You are to keep it safely until I ask you for it, whether it be within an hour from now or not for ten years. In the event of my never calling upon you for it, I want you to instruct your lawyers that when you die it is to be buried with you.

"On the contents of that little packet and their safekeeping my very life depends. In money they are worth more than half this great city. In human life and happiness their value cannot even be estimated. For something of them have men and women have fought, bled and died. Understand, it is not for my sake alone that I ask you to protect it, but for the sake of thousands of other human beings.

"No one knows and no one must ever know that I have given you this packet. And before you accept the responsibility of its safekeeping you must swear to me that you will never break the seals on it unless advised to do so by me.

"It is a strange thing to ask you to do—to bind yourself by solemn oath to guard as you would your life something of which you know nothing—but a bitter necessity compels me to do it. I myself am bound by an equally solemn oath not to reveal any more than I have at the present time.

"Were it not for that I would willingly tell you all, for you have shown yourself a man of honor to-night, Mr. Sinclair, and I feel that my confidence in you is well placed. Since the failure of my agent to arrive I have no one else in this whole city whom I can trust. Unless you will help me, as I beg you to do, all my efforts must end in failure."

She looked imploringly at Sinclair and her long lashes were wet with tears. Two hours before, his heart would have bounded at this expression of confidence in him and he would have almost agreed to go to the ends of the earth to serve her.

Now he looked coldly at her appealing face and his best judgment told him that he should refuse flatly to have anything further to do with an affair which could only end in disgrace and trouble for him.

Yet he hesitated to bring the interview to a close then and there. It was a lonely spot and how did he or how many confederates this queen of the underworld might have in call to do him violence if he should refuse to accede to her wishes?

For the first time that night he really feared that his life might be in danger. He was no coward, but there was much to him—young, on the road to wealth, about to be married. And what also would there be in sacrificing his life to a band of criminals who wished him to aid them in some plot? Discretion seemed the better part of valor in a case like this, and he decided to postpone a definite answer to this strange request until at least Dalton was in call to aid him if necessary.

"My Only Hope"

This romantic story of the mysterious contents of the packet did not appeal to a prosaic business man like Sinclair. Very probably he would have believed it if he had not known that the woman who had spoken was a thief—a pickpocket—who had robbed the man whose aid she had begged.

As it was, he thought the packet undoubtedly contained stolen jewels or negotiable securities of which she wished to get rid until sure that the police were no longer on her trail.

This story of human lives and happiness dependent upon the safekeeping of the packet was only a pleasant segment of her imagination designed to excite the sympathies of a man whom she must consider one of the most gullible persons in all the world. Of that he was firmly convinced.

"Madame Alvarez, I—I," he began, stammering in the excitement of his desire to postpone as long as possible informing her of his decision.

But she interrupted him, and he was not sorry for he hardly knew what to say.

"I know exactly what is in your mind," she said quickly. "You do not blame you at all for thinking so. You are a business man, a man of caution. You do not like to undertake any enterprise, much less a trust so sacred as this, without first giving it careful consideration. I do not want your answer now.

"Think the matter over thoroughly. Within two hours I shall be on a train bound away from Boston, perhaps never to return. If I know your answer before leaving that will be time enough. But remember," she said, laying her hand on his arm with that air of confidence which earlier in the night had so thrilled him, "you are my only hope, and if you fail me all is lost."

Sinclair made no objection to this. He did not commit himself for or against her proposal. He tried to talk and act as usual to her, but his heart was not in the effort, and he thought that he made a sorry showing.

"And now," she said, at least pretending not to notice the change in his manner, "I must ask you to wait in the car while I hide this precious bot. It will not take me long and when I return we will drive directly to the station and what must have been an exceedingly wearisome task for you will be over.

"By the way, you would better note well this locality, for this box is going to be hidden within a few steps from here and if anything should happen to me you may have to come here some day and find it."

"Not if I know myself," thought Sinclair, marveling at the woman's confidence that he would do whatever she bade him. But he said nothing as he gallantly offered to be left.

At the corner they separated, Sinclair turning back toward the car and she walking rapidly in the opposite direction. He could not resist straining his eyes after her until she was lost to view in the shadows, and he had to confess that he felt sorry that she had to go down that lonely street alone at that hour, even if she were going to hide stolen goods.

Sinclair sauntered through street after street. His attention was finally attracted by a rather low but tense conversation between two men who acted mysteriously and appeared to be hunting for something.

"I know the statue with the man on horseback," one of the men said. "It is near a stately building. Forty steps from the statue—forty steps—look carefully—"

"That may be true," replied another voice. "But how about the square mass after a hera still living?

"Sixty steps from the marble shaft and near the entrance to a large building you will find—"

The listener could not catch the words that followed. The next thing he heard was:

"The spot where the tea went overboard and crany."

Sinclair was interested and mystified. He listened intently. The first voice was heard again:

"Let me look at this Hot. The paper says something about the entrance to the Cradle of Liberty. Yes, we must look there. We will also search every crack about the famous old church edifice now used for historical purposes, and look into the entrance to the building named after the third President of the United States. After that, I think, our task will have been completed."

Dalton was asleep in the machine. Sinclair did not bother to awaken him, but sat down to smoke and consider by what means of going about the recovery of his missing package. The night had been long and hard, and before he realized he, too, was asleep.

A merry laugh awoke both him and Dalton with a start. It was Madame Alvarez returning without the box and in high spirits.

"Both asleep, eh?" she cried. "Well, I do not wonder. But we are all ready to go now, and if you will drive us to the station, Sir Knight of the Motor, as fast as you can, we may all make up for lost."

With another laugh she stepped lightly into her seat. As she bent over to pull the robes more closely about her, Sinclair saw her pick up something from the bottom of the car.

"What is this?" she said. "Ah, a purse, and oh, so fat and heavy!"

Sinclair looked, then rumbled his sleepy eyes and looked again. It was his pocketbook.

HANNAN SWINGS AXE IN WATER DEPARTMENT

Water Commissioner William E. Hannan swung his economy axe to-day, lopping fifty-eight laborers from the pay rolls of the department, reducing the pay of forty more and making many transfers, as well as placing the department upon a new basis as agreed upon last week after several conferences with the Finance Commission. The discharges will save the city of Boston a trifle less than $42,000 yearly, as well as insuring, so Commissioner Hannan believes, more efficient service for the city.

Adam McClure, foreman of pipe laying, has been made one of the new deputy superintendents with an increase in salary from $1,500 to $2,000. John W. Leahon will remain as deputy superintendent at a salary of $2,000. Patrick J. Kelley, now an inspector, takes the foremanship of pipe laying, vacated by Assistant Superintendent McClure, at a $3 per day wage.

A department of inspection and waste has been created, and John H. Flynn, formerly deputy superintendent, has been placed at its head with a salary of $1,800. William T. Linehan has been placed at the head of the new department of repair and service at $1,600.

Samuel J. Hallett of the Dorchester yard has been promoted to be head inspector of gates at $1,600.

In the revision of the salaries of clerks Commissioner Hannan has made the following revision:

Charles Raymond and William B. Dudley, raised from $1,400 to $1,600 each; Benjamin P. Brown, raised from $1,200 to $1,400; Simeon DeCook, John A. Finnegan and Benjamin T. Hall, reduced from $1,700 to $1,600.

In the inspection and waste department the salary of Chief Inspector Theodore L. Hall is reduced from $1,800 to $1,500, and that of John H. Hassett from $1,200 to $1,000. Inspector Wendell P. Lee is dropped from $1,200 to $1,100, and Meter Inspectors Richard E. Dwight, Lawrence P. Furlong, William Hickey, Patrick R. Kinsey and John C. Regan from $1,500 to $1,100.

Foreman James A. Anderson of the Albany street yard is reduced from $1,500 to $1,200.

Joseph F. Mayo has been reduced from foreman in the distribution division and his pay will be $800 a year instead of $1,500.

Edward P. Fogarty, formerly one of the stenographers of Mayor Fitzgerald, had his salary cut from $1,300 to $1,100.

After bidding "good-by" to his wife and son Secretary Taft said to newspaper men: "This has been one of the most enjoyable commencements I ever attended. Every moment has been full of delight. WOMEN AND CHILDREN FLEE MATTRESS FIRE

Scores of women and children rushed from their homes in the six small wooden tenement houses in the rear of No. 83 Longwood avenue at noon today and the small courtyard became filled with a dense, suffocating smoke from a burning mattress.

The courtyard, which is surrounded by six houses, is not twenty feet wide, and the flames from the highly combustible material in the mattress threatened the buildings. The blaze was extinguished in a few minutes but caused a whole lot of excitement.

Sleeping in a carriage near the fire was William J. Mylie, a seven-months-old baby. The mother, Mrs. James Mylie, became hysterical when she saw the flames so near her baby. Uttering a wild shriek she rushed towards the child and dragged him to safety.

When the fire department responded to an alarm they found nothing by the smoldering debris and three score excited persons.

OFFICERS NEAR DEATH AS BOY OPENS FIRE

Lad of Seventeen Turns on Captors in Police Station, but Is Quickly Overpowered.

In a struggle to wrest a loaded revolver from the possession of Timothy J. Sullivan, a seventeen-year-old prisoner, who had just been arrested, Lieutenant Daniel F. Egan had a narrow escape from being shot in the City Point police station early this morning. While Egan and two fellow officers were grappling with the youth, the revolver was discharged and a bullet was imbedded in the floor at the Lieutenant's feet.

"I'll blow the whole bunch of you into eternity," Sullivan is claimed to have remarked, as he straightened himself, gun in hand and his back to the wall, for attack.

Lieutenant Egan stood at one side of the prisoner. Patrolmen McGovern and Seery were in front of him. Like a flash, the three officers leaped upon the youth, and Egan grabbed for the weapon as it was discharged. After a rough and tumble fight Sullivan was overpowered and locked up.

Arrested in Boat.

Out rowing in Dorchester Bay, Sullivan was discovered at an early hour by officers of the police boat Ferret. He was taken ashore and questioned. Roughly dressed and sullen, the boy was suspicious and refused to tell who he was or say where he was going. McGovern took him to Station 12.

"Say, lieutenant, I'd like to step behind the desk to talk with you. I'll tell you something in confidence," Sullivan remarked as he was led into the station house.

Then as the officers were preparing to search him his right hand flew into his hip pocket. Backing up to the wall, he drew the shining revolver.

"Now line up," he shouted.

As the youth raised the revolver the officers sprang upon him and in the struggle that followed two of them had their faces scratched. The gun, after discharging, dropped to the floor. Shouting like mad, Sullivan was dragged to a cell and locked up.

Was Walking / enal.

The revolver was heavily loaded. A half dozen bullets were found in Sullivan's pockets. The prisoner told contradictory stories, saying first that he lived in Somerville and later that he lived in the West End. He said his father was a traveling salesman, now in Maine.

Sullivan admitted that he had been arrested before. The police of the Hanover street station to-day are looking up his record, and they are of the opinion he may have been implicated with Tighe, the youth in a soldier's uniform, who was arrested after a chase yesterday for robbing a Hanover street clothing store.

L STRUCTURE CRIPPLED BY TRAIN CRASH

The Atlantic avenue elevated railway structure was temporarily disabled early to-day by a Union Railway freight train, and for several hours it was not deemed safe to run the southbound trains while it was being repaired.

The freight train was composed of extra high and wide cars which struck the temporary supports under the structure at the foot of State street, where the station is being enlarged. The wooden timbers forming the support were displaced to such an extent that the northbound trains were not run for half an hour and the southbound trains not until nearly noon.

The accident resulted in much inconvenience for the public, although extra cars were run on the surface lines for their accommodation.

CYCLIST SAVED GIRL.

QUINCY, June 26.—James Wheland was a real hero in the nick of time when, seeing a frightened team rushing down the street and about to run down a little girl he rushed ahead of the horses on his bicycle, picked the child up and carried her to safety.

TROOPS GUARD BODY OF GROVER CLEVELAND

FUNERAL RITES TO-DAY OF EXTREME SIMPLICITY AT SORROWING WIDOW'S REQUEST.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 26.—Four companies of infantry and a troop of cavalry guarded the body of former President Grover Cleveland at Westlands to-day at the funeral services. The State militiamen also guarded the route from the Cleveland home to the cemetery.

In accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Cleveland, the funeral this afternoon is of extreme simplicity. There are no military bands, no military escort, no eulogy. Only the necessity for guarding President Roosevelt won the consent of Mrs. Cleveland to have troops present in police capacity. Mrs. Cleveland wished to bear her grief alone. Only those invited to the funeral and a few newspaper men are permitted to enter the cemetery, which is guarded by mounted troops and members of the National Guard of New Jersey.

Service Very Simple.

Four clergymen officiate at the house and at the grave, reading the burial service from the Presbyterian Book of Common Worship, but offering no eulogy.

This simple but impressive service is conducted by Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton, the Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church of New York; the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Princeton, where the Cleveland family attended, and the Rev. Maitland Y. Bartlett, former pastor of the same church.

There are no honorary pallbearers. Those who bear Mr. Cleveland's body to its final resting place in the Cleveland plot are Mayor George B. McClellan, Paul Morton, Commodore E. C. Benedict, Richard Watson Gilder of New York, Professor Paul Van Dyke, Dean Andrew of the West, Professor John G. Hibben, James S. Morgan, a nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan; A. D. Russell, Professor Howard McClenahan and Bayard Stockton of Princeton.

Services at 5 O'Clock.

The services at the house, which begin at 5 o'clock, will be brief, after which the cortege is formed and proceeds to the cemetery.

Twenty-seven carriages comprise the funeral cortege. The only floral decoration on the coffin is a wreath of ivy from Nassau Hall, Princeton University, which was planted by the class of '08. The first carriage is for the ministers who officiate at the grave.

In the second carriage is Mrs. Cleveland, her son, Richard, and Dr. Joseph B. Strayer.

Then follow Miss Rose Cleveland, a sister of Mr. Cleveland, and his daughter Esther. The fourth carriage contains Cleveland R. Bacon, Miss Mary L. Hastings and Professor and Mrs. Wood.

The fifth and sixth carriages are set aside for Mr. and Mrs. Hoddleston, Mrs. John G. Pinley, Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, George Shipley and Miss Heckler, who nursed Mr. Cleveland through his long illness.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt ride in the seventh carriage with Secretary Loeb, and behind them a carriage filled with secret service men.

Others who go to the cemetery are Justice Fuller, Governor Fort of New Jersey, Governor Hughes, Secretary Cortelyou, former Secretary Carlisle, former Secretary Vilas, Mrs. Daniel Lamont, former Secretary Olney, former Secretary Fairchild, former Secretary Franio, former Attorney General Parnum, former Secretary Herbert and Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia, all of whom served under Cleveland when he was in office.

Then follow State Senator Kean of New Jersey, State Senator Briggs of New Jersey, Charles Goodyear, General Ansell Mc Cook, Dr. St. Clair McElway, H. F. Fine of Princeton University, Bishop McCall and Father Leahy of New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Charles Hamlin, Mr. and Mrs. George Armour, representatives of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, a few intimate friends and the household servants.

Cable Sympathies.

Immediate members of the family and a few close friends alone are permitted to have another look at the dead man's face before the funeral. President Roosevelt said he would not be among them.

More cablegrams arrived to-day. Viscount Kaneto of Tokio cabled the Mikado's sympathies. The Nicaraguan and Brazilian governments also cabled.

THE WEATHER.

High tide 9:48 a. m, 10 p. m.

To be Effective You Don't Need to be Harsh

Nature is never violent.

When any bodily function goes wrong, she corrects it in gentle ways.

Please do as Nature does.

Don't seek to aid her with violent physic—with salts, castor oil or pill cathartics.

They ruin the stomach

They harden the bowels, just as constant irritation will callous the skin.

Then the bowels cease to supply their own laxative. That's chronic constipation.

You can aid the bowels just as effectively in a gentle way.

That way is Cascarets.

They act without pain, without irritation. They are just as harmless as food.

If the bowels are calloused, you may need one Cascaret twice a day for a time. But you'll need them less and less.

For Cascarets restore the natural functions. Soon you won't need them at all.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure to get the genuine, with C.C.C. as every tablet. The box is marked like this:

The vest-pocket box is 10 cents. The month-treatment box 50 cents. 12,500,000 boxes sold annually.

MORE ROOM NEEDED TO HANDLE BIG CROWDS AT WONDERLAND

Upper picture shows the duel scene in the Japanese ..... at Wonderland; lower one, little Takoo, the smallest acrobat in the world, with one of his friends.

Additions Being Made and New Acts Booked for Heavy Mid-summer Business.

The Wonderland Park management has arranged that children be admitted to the park free if accompanied by adults.

This will be the last week of the Five Flying Bolses, whose triple trapeze act is the sensation of the country, and of the Beike Sisters, a trio of beautiful tight wire performers, whose act in the circus arena is unique and daring.

Manager Whalen has added several new performers to his Japanese drama at the Adjuna Fun Palace in the Japanese village, and elaborated the play to embrace every phase of Japanese life, including love, courtship, marriage, quarrel, revenge, a garden duel. This is a typical Japanese entertainment in which little Takoo, the smallest acrobat in the world plays a prominent part, while his older brother performs feats seldom attempted by adult gymnasts.

The Japanese drama is enticing on so well that the management intends to enlarge the stage by one-half and increase the seating capacity.

On next Monday and Tuesday when the Sunday American Outing Club visits Wonderland with free tickets of admission to the park to the Japanese drama, the show will be continuous so that every guest of the SUNDAY AMERICAN will see the play. Should any prefer the Japanese Maze to the theatre their coupons will be accepted there.

Get Ready for Fourth of July.

The park show managers are making preparations for the Fourth of July and the great crowds of July and August, in many instances increasing seating capacity of their places and adding new features. The plan is to give the public for its money in every direction in appreciation of the liberal patronage bestowed by the amusement public of Greater Boston.

The Salem Cadet Band will remain at Wonderland for some weeks yet, with soloists and singers, including "Sandy" Chapman, rendering the "New Wonder" and song twice daily from the bandstand.

The races at the Roller Skating Rink are becoming daily more exciting and roller skating bids fair to become one of the features at the park. It is the only rink in the East under canvas and open at the sides to the cool breezes of afternoon and evening.

Exciting Roller Skating Races.

Miss May Cornett of Providence and Miss Peggy O'Connor of Boston have competed for the championship all this week, and will race again this evening. They are among the fastest women skaters of the world. In competition one night this week they made two three-mile heats respectively in 3:03, 3:15 and 3:17. Miss O'Connor winning twice and the third being a dead heat.

They are so evenly matched that even the rink attaches and the band strike work toward the hurricane finishes.

Next Sunday's AMERICAN will, according to a weekly plan, publish two free tickets for use Monday and Tuesday, one for the park in general and one for the Japanese drama, and readers should make certain of getting their papers by ordering them at once.

Major General Putnam, U. S. A.

THE hero of Bunker Hill—who first marshaled the Riflemen of the Revolution—and left his plow standing in the furrow to hoist the banner of defiance against legislative oppression! Who has not heard of him?

When others faltered and grew pale, facing fearful odds, this intrepid old Puritan Commander remained strong-hearted, steadfast and true. His tavern, known to fame as the "GENERAL WOLFE," was (in its day) a celebrated meeting place for Revolutionary veterans.

In its cozy bar parlor they delighted to periodically gather and drink with him the foaming juices of the malt; toasting each other in memory of the splendid and heroic days when they gave blood and treasure to found this nation and write the immortal principle of "PERSONAL LIBERTY" in our laws forevermore.

THE WORLD'S ONE GREAT BEAUTIFIER OF WOMEN

Dr. Charles Flesh Food is a Dainty, Satisfying Ointment that, applied to the skin, nourishes impoverished tissue and builds firm, healthy flesh.

For quickly rounding out and beautifying hollow, sunken cheeks, a scrawny neck and thin, wasted arms, Dr. Charles Flesh Food is unequalled, and there is no excuse for any woman to show unsightly angles if she will use it as directed.

FOR DEVELOPING THE BUST

Undeveloped breasts and those lost through nursing or ill health may be materially increased in size and made full, firm, plump and rounded into a beautiful contour by the use of this wonderful flesh builder. It acts alike on the growing girl and the matured woman.

On Sale At All Drug and Department Stores

Every woman who has never had the opportunity of trying Dr. Charles Flesh Food should do so without delay, for no other preparation will be found that will bring so pleasing results.

HERE'S A JOB FOR BROOKLINE TOWN FATHERS

Woman Librarian Wants Child and Rooster "Abated" as Nuisances.

Secretary Ed McGettrick of the Brookline Board of Selectmen has the job of his life on his hands.

He has been requested by that honorable body to adjust matters in the complaint of Miss Louisa M. Hooper, librarian at the town library, who has complained of the crying of three-year-old Evangeline E. McElroy and of the crowing of Evangeline's pet bantam rooster as public nuisances.

Miss Hooper wants the "nuisances abated," as she modestly requests.

Secretary Ed admits that he is up against it.

"The crowing of a rooster may be a nuisance," he says, doubtfully, "but I don't see how the crying of a baby can be a nuisance, that is, not in the legal sense."

The puzzled secretary is "thinking it over." And the outcome of the secretary's cogitation is being anxiously awaited not only by the interested owners of roosters and other pet stock, but also by the equally fascinated proprietors of divers and sundry Brookline babies of the crying age.

A rooster and his crow may be abated they admit. But how to abate a baby, that is another question.

Of course, the rooster wouldn't crow any louder if they abate the baby—but then, abating a baby is something from which not even Solomon had a recipe.

Why Shouldn't He Crow!

Evangeline is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. McElroy, whose premises at No. 80 School street back up against the town library property. The rooster does crow, now and then, as roosters do. There is a pretty little bantam hen on the McElroy premises, and the rooster occasionally lets out a lusty crow, just to let the little bantam know there is a masculine protector around.

Evangeline cries sometimes, too, as her indignant mother admits.

"Evangeline is an exceptionally good little girl," says the mother. "She cries at times, to be sure. So did I when I was a child. What person is there who didn't. I suppose the women in the library would like to have me put a hot potato in Evangeline's mouth to keep her from even talking. Or perhaps they think I should pepper the rooster's tongue. It's a wonder they don't try to stop the birds singing in the tree tops.

Mrs. McElroy didn't try the potato or red pepper treatment, however. What she did do, though, was to speak her mind freely to Secretary Ed. McGettrick.

Outrage, Says Neighbor.

"I went over to the Town Hall and told Mr. McGettrick just what I thought about the women in the library," added the wrathful mother.

People who were aware that Mrs. McElroy "spoke her mind" to Secretary Ed are speculating with interest on just what Mrs. McElroy said or what any mother would say on being told that her baby girl had been declared a nuisance.

Little Miss Evangeline hasn't spoken at length about the matter. But she did say with baby emphasis:

"I don't want anybody to take my roosters."

Mrs. A. Calvin Crochet, wife of a Boston banker and next-door neighbors to the McElroys, says the complaint about Evangeline and the crowing bantam is "an outrage."

The Board of Selectmen, with cautious self consideration, has turned the whole job over to its long-suffering Secretary Ed. The board might courageously and firmly abate a rooster, but the town ordinances fail to provide for "abating a child's crying." It's all up to Secretary Ed., who's thinking it over.

Poor Ed.!

BABY GIRL CRIED AND SCRATCHED

All the Time—Torturing Eczema Covered Her Body—Could Not Sleep—Doctor Said Sores Would Last for Years—Skin Now Clear.

CURED IN THREE MONTHS BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I take great pleasure in telling you what a great help I was for me to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for my baby niece. She was suffering from that terrible torture, eczema. It was all over her body but the worst was on her face and hands. Her hands were so bad that she could not hold anything, she cried and scratched all the time and could not sleep night or day from the scratching. I had her under the doctor's care for a year and a half and he seemed to do her no good. I took her to the best doctor in the city and he said that she would have the sores until she was six years old. But if I had depended on the doctor my baby would have lost her mind and died from the want of aid.

"I used all the remedies that everybody told me about and I tortured the child almost to death. Then I saw in the paper how Cuticura was the thing for irritating skin. I bathed her with warm water and Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. She was cured in three months. Now her skin is as clear and smooth as it could be. I shall recommend the use of Cuticura wherever I see the skin in bad condition." (Signed) Alice L. Dowell, 4769 Easton Ave., St. Louis, Mo., May 2 and 20, 1907."

He Took a Long Chance

By KENNETT HARRIS

If you have had dull pains in the back of your head, accompanied by stiffness in the joints, headache, sore throat, a sense of fullness after eating or a disinclination for mental or physical effort; if you have had ringing sensations, numbness, hot and cold flashes, buzzing in the ears or insomnia; if your vision has seemed to be impaired or dark spots have appeared to float before your eyes and the sense of smell has been dulled—all of these symptoms, or any one of them—it is quite likely that you have wondered whether it would not be a mighty good idea to give Strogweller's Bonanza a trial.

Strogweller's Bonanza is one of the medical marvels of the age. It was the crowning achievement of that celebrated scientist, old Dr. Strogweller. For twenty-five years the old doctor sat up nights in his laboratory bending all the energies of his mighty mind to the discovery of a compound that could truly be called a panacea for every sort of human ill. An account of his experiments would fill volumes.

At last he found it in a decoction of harmless herbs. There is a standing regard of $1,000 which will be paid to anyone proving the existence of mineral substance in the Bonanza, and up to the present time nobody has claimed that $1,000. Why? Because there isn't anything mineral in it.

Praised by Others

Elias Flick sat in his beautifully furnished office one morning opening his mail. Mr. Flick was the sole owner and proprietor of Strogweller's Bonanza, and if there was one thing that he liked more than anything else, opening mail was that thing.

Orders from druggists: "Please ship at your earliest convenience one dozen cases of Bonanza." "I inclose check for $90 in payment for one dozen cases of Bonanza, less 10 per cent discount for cash." "I inclose money order." "I inclose 50 cents in silver, for which please send sample bottle of Bonanza, as per your ad," checks, silver and postal orders poured in by the score.

But money and orders were not the only things that the mail contained. This particular morning there was an expression of heartfelt gratitude from the Mayor of Puslevville, sent through a Bonanza agency, with a cabinet photograph of the dignitary. There was another song of thankfulness from a prominent clergyman.

A well-known banker had been impelled by a sense of his duty to suffering humanity to relate the circumstances of a miraculous cure Bonanza had effected in his case, accompanied by his photograph.

Also a communication from the Grand Seneschal of the Princely Order of United Aurochs and another from a leading actress of Topaz, N. M. None of them could say enough for the virtues of Bonanza.

Mr. Flick read each testimonial carefully as he came to it, attached it to its corresponding photograph with equal care and put in to a drawer.

This One Was a Peach

Presently he came to a fat letter written in pencil in a rather crabbed hand and tied up with a picture of a plump but patriarchal person with a particularly pleasant expression. There was something compelling about the face. It spoke of honesty, kindliness and respectability most eloquently. It was the sort of face that inspired confidence.

Mr. Flick turned eagerly to the letter. With the spelling corrected, it ran as follows:

"Dear Doctor: I want to write to tell you what Bonanza has done for me. I was always naturally plodding and puny like and was most of the time sick. I never had a well day in my life. If there is anything to ketch I am bound to catch it and the rest of the time I was felt crippled. I was born only 118 pounds and it took all the money I made paying doctor bills.

"Last Winter I took sick with the grip and was given up by three physicians. A neighbor told me to try Bonanza and I took a bottle, following directions. In three days I was up and around. I have took over sixteen bottles since and I am now weighing 174 pounds and my job is coming out on a bald place that I had.

"I have plowed thirty acres with my team this Spring already and done all the chores and I am going to get on without a hired man this year, not having an ache or a pain and won a footrace, on which I netted $5, with a friend.

"My wife says I am a new man. I wouldn't take $1,000 for the good Bonanza done me. Yours truly, Benjamin P. Duggin, 12 years in Arndt's Grocery, Kane, Pa.

"P. S.—I can bend over and touch my toes."

"That's a peach," said Mr. Flick, tossing the letter over to his secretary. "You see to having cuts made of that mug right away, and cuts of every thing else, too. A prominent stock breeder and farmer, if he plows with an ox team.

"Don't forget it. I'm going home. I'm not feeling extra well today. Tell 'em to be mighty careful with that picture, too. I've got a kind of a headache."

Decides to Try It

It was a pretty bad kind of headache by the time Mr. Flick got home. It was accompanied by an aching of the joints and a buzzing of the ears. There was that all-overish feeling.

He lay on the lounge in his library and thanked heaven that he at least was not obliged to be the cheerful, hearty person that he would never want to get up again, and as his mind ran from one thing to another of Benjamin P. Duggin he envied that veteran his vigor.

Presently his wife came in and found him moaning. His face was scarlet and his eyes unnaturally bright.

"I'm going to telephone for Dr. Connor right away," she said.

"Wait," commanded Mr. Flick. "Don't you do it. As long as you're around, run around to the drug store and see if you can't get a bottle of Bonanza."

"James!" exclaimed his wife, "are you crazy?"

"No," he returned, "I mean just what I say."

"That stuff! You really must be out of your mind. Do you know you're sick?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Flick, "I think I am, and that's why I want Bonanza. You may think this is delirium, but I don't honestly believe that there must be something curative in it after all."

Beauty Eating

It means care.

Choose the simple diet.

Do it for one month at least.

Begin dinner with a simple, clear soup or broth.

Cut heavy gravies, fat meat, and tea and coffee.

Then let the simple diet for girls who desire to have bright eyes and clear skins.

Fresh fish, planked, broiled or boiled, may well replace beef, though many may require a chop at one meal.

Fresh eggs, cooked raw, though soft-boiled answer every purpose, may be eaten with the best results. What better for breakfast?

Fresh vegetables are as delicious and health-giving that one might well turn vegetarian. Cooks who persistently spoil vegetables do great evil in rendering them unpopular.

Stewed and fresh fruits should replace tarts, pies and puddings for dessert. One or two pieces of candy, mint drops or other sort will supply the need for sweets and should linger at the close of the meal.

The Story of an Unhappy Wife

A Novelette That Every Girl and Every Girl's Mother Should Read

By Beatrice Fairfax

CHAPTER I.

"Have I Done the Right Thing?"

"YOU'LL be an old maid, Nellie, just as sure as you're born," said Mrs. Watson, gazing disconsolately at her capable looking daughter.

"You'll soon be twenty-four," she went on. "All your girl friends are married. They found husbands at a fight, but then they weren't so hard to suit as you are. I'm sure I don't know what's the matter with you."

"Perhaps," with a little laugh, "you are waiting for a Duke, or a Prince."

"That's it, mother. I'm waiting for the man who's a prince among men, so far as I'm concerned," said Nellie, cheerfully, "if he doesn't come, why, I don't have to be an old maid, I suppose."

"I never thought a daughter of mine would be such a failure," sighed her mother.

"Your sisters are both married. When I was your age I had been married eight years."

"Mother, dear, please don't let us go over the old ground again. I am strong and I like my work and earn a good living. Why should I marry unless I find a man I can't be happy without?"

All a Mistake

"That's just it," said her mother. "You have got it in your head that you must be desperately in love in order to be happy. That's all a mistake. Lots of women are happy now who were not so deeply in love when they married, and your chances will be getting fewer all the time."

"But, mother, after all, I'm only twenty-four. That's not so fearfully old! Just you wait! The right man is sure to come along, and then you'll be proud of the fine match I'll make."

"Perhaps," said her mother doubtfully, "but you are getting to look so old maidish! Mrs. Brown said to me just the other day: 'Why doesn't Nellie get married? She's getting on, and looks quite settled.'

"Never mind, mother. Mrs. Brown's a cat. Don't you care what she says. I don't."

But Nellie turned away with a sigh, for the foregoing argument was getting to be one of daily occurrence.

"Marry!" said her mother.

"Marry!" said her sisters and friends.

And "Marry me," said Jack Dalton, over and over again, until Nellie was sick of the very word "marry."

"Then let me make you sure," said Jack, taking her in his arms and kissing her gently.

"Why in the world won't she take Jack?" said Mrs. Watson to her married daughters. "He's getting on, and looks quite well off. A blooming young matron of thirty-five. "It's just because she's so hard to suit—that's she doesn't love him, and can't bear to think of marrying him."

"Is he perfectly steady?" said the other sister.

"Oh, yes; steady enough. Takes a few drinks occasionally, but Nellie could fix all that," said Mrs. Watson confidently. "I'll tell you what, girls, let's keep at her until she accepts him. All she needs is some one to make up her mind for her. I know that in the years to come she'd be very glad we urged her to marry Jack."

"What are you three whispering about?" said Nellie, entering the room like a fresh breeze.

The conspirators looked guiltily at one another, and then Sister Mary spoke up.

"I was just telling about the moonlight picnic we're going to have. Of course, you are going? All the young married people and girls are. Hasn't Jack invited you?"

"No," said Nellie. "I haven't seen Jack very much lately. I rather discouraged his coming. It did not seem quite right when I did not really care for him."

"Well, it's a shame to miss all the fun. People will begin to call you an old maid, Ned, and to see you are out of the running."

"Let them say what they like," was the answer, the words "old maid" repeated for the third time that day, sank deep. That an hour later, when the telephone rang and Jack Dalton asked her to go with him on the moonlight picnic, she found herself accepting the invitation quite graciously, and her mother, listening, breathed a sigh of satisfaction.

The picnic was delightful, and Jack was at his best. He never mentioned the word marriage, and on the drive home made himself so interesting that Nellie once caught herself thinking "Perhaps life with a strong man like this is care for you and pet you would not be bad, after all."

Not Quite Sure

Her sisters seemed so happy with their husbands and children, and perhaps she was silly to be so particular, and mother wanted it so, and, congenial as her work was, it did seem monotonous at times, and—

"Well, don't you think that perhaps you are getting to care a little bit, after all? Don't you think we could be very happy in a home of our own? I have loved you so long, and no one could treat you better than I would. Do say yes, dear," murmured a persuasive voice in her ear.

"No! No! Yes!—perhaps. Oh, I don't know, Jack. I really didn't feel sure of myself."

"Then let me make you sure," said Jack, taking her in his arms and kissing her gently.

It was a very solemn Nellie who looked out into the moonlight night a little later. "Have I done the right thing?" she questioned herself. "This is not the way I thought I'd feel when I promised to marry the man I loved. Was it love that made me accept Jack Dalton, or just the urging of mother and the girls and the glamour of the moonlight?

"Am I going to be a happy wife?"

The Line of Linen

ONE of the novelties of the season is a line of linen just inside the reverse of a jacket, which gives it a clean and neat appearance that nothing else so small could possibly do. This is really a very good idea, and one that may be carried out in many attractive ways. For instance, if one's suit were a plain black and it looked too dark for the season, one might easily add a little line of cerise or magenta, which would brighten the whole and take away that unpleasing look to which so many people object. Linen bands are especially used on suits for girls between twelve and fifteen years.

Expert Advice on Beauty

By the Professor

RED SPOTS ON FACE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Kindly advise how to get rid of large red spots on the cheek bones and under the eyes; also tell me how to make the skin look clear and white, as mine has a muddy color. Thanking you.

C. C. K.

THESE spots are doubtless due to bad digestion and will leave of their own accord when the cause is removed. It may be, however, that the nerves are responsible, but in that case as well as the other, the thing to do is to remove the cause. Get after the diet and eat only such things as are simple and easily digested. If the nerves are on a strain, remove it, sleep much and exercise in the open air. At night use cleansing cream instead of soap and water. In the morning use hot water, followed by cold, and once a week steam the face. Use plenty of cream, massaging it in with gentle circular motions. All this will bring the blood to the surface and cause it to circulate more evenly. Don't forget, however, that much depends upon the diet. This treatment will relieve the muddy color, as the same thing doubtless causes both conditions.

FILL HOLLOW CHEEKS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Will you please tell me of some thing that will fill out my cheeks and put a color back of them? Also will roller skating help my thin?

ANXIOUS M. J. P.

USE any good face cream. Those containing lanoline are the most fattening, but often will make hair grow on the face. Before using this cream at night open the pores by bathing the face in hot water. Then apply plenty of the cream and work it in by a gentle circular motion. Pat the cheeks to bring the blood to the surface and work until quite a little bit of the cream has been absorbed. Then dash the cheeks with cold water into which you have placed a few drops of tincture of benzoin, wiping dry with a piece of soft cheesecloth. You ought to be able after a while to materially fill up the hollows. Roller skating is good exercise, but like all others can be overdone, in which case it would reduce your flesh.

Woman's Moods and Tenses

By DOROTHY DIX

THERE are women so close and stingy that they will not even extend the hospitality of their minds to a new thought.

Neither one of them knows it, but many an evil woman becomes the avenger of the wrong done to a good woman.

When women say of another woman that she is "nice" they have done the best they could to damn her with faint praise.

Women like to weep because they always feel as if they had washed away all of their sins in their tears, and were ready to take a fresh start with a clean slate.

The most fatal mistake a woman can make is to acquire a reputation as a notable housekeeper, for it dooms her to domestic slavery as long as she lives.

Family jars are like broken jelly jars. They may often be mended, but they always show the crack, and the sweets within them are mighty apt to ferment and sour.

Life would be much better worth living if it were not for our in-laws.

A frank lie is worth to a woman who tells us her troubles. An interesting conversationalist is the woman who listens while we tell our woes.

You can never convince a girl that brains are better than beauty, as long as the maiden with a peaches and cream complexion and marcelled hair and no sense has six men in her train, while the knobby-browed college graduate has to pack around a book for company.

The crowning proof of woman's modesty is to be found in the fact that she always shuts her eyes tightly and refuses, at any price, to look upon the naked truth.

To tell how old a woman is, observe the way she dresses. If her frocks are pale pinks and blues and frilly, and she wears a pinkish artful hat, she is half-past-forty if she is a day.

The first year of matrimony is adoration. The second year exploration. The balance generally endurance.

Has the Business Girl Any Right to Man's Courtesy?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I notice in the daily papers there is much discussion regarding the treatment of the business women by men.

One correspondent says that when women enter the business world they practically declare themselves man's equal in every way. A point he made was the fact that a girl does not rise when a man rarely gives a seat to a woman if he thinks she be a business woman, but refraining from the theatres in the evening that same man will readily offer his seat, because (as he said) there is a different and better class of women traveling at that hour.

Well, then, suppose one of those women lost her money and overspring in a few days, and had to go to work as a business woman, would she then be instantly heeled in that other class with which "no love and gentleness are associated," to quote this same correspondent?

I wonder if that same man I would not dare call him a gentleman ever stops to think why women have entered business. Is it because they really wanted to, or was it not because they really had to? Is it because a husband could not provide for them?

I am a business woman who, having been married, has had to go to work herself. I support three children.

If all were to take the wealthy class of women as a standard, to what would we come? They spend their time filling the papers with the wonderful and ridiculous. They are the ones who can best afford to rear and rear children for future good citizens, and they are the ones who seem to think it a crime to have children, to say nothing of taking the trouble to raise them. That is left to "help."

Isn't it the wonderful girl who is the better of the two—the one who bravely puts her shoulder to the wheel and helps her family along?

I hope that I have not taken up too much space, but this is a subject which I think is well worth discussing.

A BUSINESS GIRL.

I hope that I have not taken up too much space, but this is a subject which I think is well worth discussing.

A BUSINESS GIRL.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

NO APOLOGY NECESSARY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of a young lady who lives in this town at one of several occasions, but have never been to her home. I took one evening the liberty of asking if I might call, and my request was not granted, on account of certain good reasons which were given me. Now, what I want to know is: Do I owe the young lady an apology for taking the initiative in this respect? Also, is it perfectly legitimate to go out with other young ladies while I am corresponding with this young lady in question, as long as I am not engaged to any one?

J. J. I.

No, there is no apology necessary. It was her place to invite you to call, but you did no harm and simply showed your interest in her. As long as you are not engaged to some one else who you should not go out with other girls. However, if you were deeply interested in her, you would not care to go out with any other girls.

BRING HER TO HER SENSES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a married man, and have been happily married for the past six years, until about two months ago. I had a steady working position for about four months and my wife thinks that she loves him. He drinks and gambles, and I feel sorry for the boy and girl. She has told some of her friends that she loves him and wants my advice. I do not drink and have always been good to her. What would you advise me to do? If he loves her he can have her, but I don't think he can support her.

H. F. H.

In the first place I would get hold of the man and forbid him the house. Then talk to your wife. Try and make her see what a poor sort of man he is; that he drinks and can never make her happy. I think she will be able to make her see how very foolish she was to be in love with him.

Have Right Attitude in Housework

HOUSEWORK should be regarded as a means of making one a broader, healthier, better woman. Work of every kind, if approached in the right spirit and performed to the best of one's ability, gives enjoyment and culture, says Table Talk.

The wrong attitude produces a cramped condition. By resisting and complaining one's nature becomes narrow and inferior. How many say: "I hate housework," "I dislike cooking," "I despise washing dishes," "I detest sweeping and dusting." If housework, cooking, dishwashing, sweeping and dusting have to be done, why grumble and complain? The work only seems more difficult; none can be any longer to do. Why not then do the necessary things cheerfully and therefore easily and quickly?

As an aid to acquiring the right mental attitude bring romance and art into household tasks and thus lift them above drudgery. Try new ways of doing things. Be original. Because your mother or neighbor does a thing in a certain way, it does not follow that there is not an easier and better way. There are continued advances in domestic science as well as in astronomy, electricity and philosophy. Combine beauty with use. A useful thing is not of necessity homely, even if it is a bowl, a pot or a pan.

Find out the essentials and non-essentials. Let such things as can be slighted be slighted a little. Don't think that be-

RHODE ISLAND LEAGUE CONVENTION TO-NIGHT

DELEGATIONS FROM ALL OVER STATE FLOCK TO PROVIDENCE TO ATTEND BIG MEETING.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 26.—The first State convention of the newly organized Independence party will be held this evening at Alfredian Hall in this city and promises to be a banner gathering, and an auspicious opening to the party's prominence in State politics.

The energies of the leaders, which have been bent toward this convention for the past two months, have borne good fruit and it is the sole topic in political circles of the State, while the eyes of all the citizens are watching the results of the convention.

The announcement that two such able speakers as John A. Coulthurst, candidate on the Independence League ticket for Mayor of Boston last December, and John Temple Graves of Georgia are to address the members of the League, has created a deeper interest in the convention among the adherents of the party in all parts of the State. From all the other cities and towns where branch leagues have been organized, delegations have made arrangements to be present at the convention and listen to the remarks of these speakers on the League and its principles in National politics.

Each Member Given Vote.

The larger vote for delegates to the Independence League National convention at Chicago has borne out the wisdom of the executive committee in taking the initiative and referendum principle in making the nominations for delegates and voting for them.

This method of allowing the members of the League to nominate their own candidates and giving each member of the party a direct vote in the selection of the delegates and alternates has resulted in the casting of a complete vote of the strength of the League all over the State, and it is very probable that the contests will be close.

The convention will be called to order in Alfredian Hall, at the corner of Weybosset and Eddy streets, at 8 o'clock.

The executive committee at its meeting yesterday afternoon decided that the temporary officers for the convention will be President James H. O'Neill as chairman and James G. Dunn as secretary.

Rivalry for Honor Places.

This organization is not to be made permanent, as there is to be a change when the matter of permanent officers is called for, the probabilities being that Frank G. Meresewether of East Providence will be elected permanent chairman of the convention, while James G. Dunn will be chosen permanent secretary.

It has been decided that the nominations for Presidential electors to represent the Independence League party on the official ballot this November should be made at this meeting instead of calling a special convention for this purpose, and considerable rivalry immediately sprung up among the members for these positions of honor.

There are four such nominations to be made and already there is a list of about fifteen candidates seeking the four nominations, and the contest for these four offices promises to be of considerable interest.

Though the League has been operation less than six months in the State, in the short time that the leaders of the party have been at work its power has already been felt in political quarters, and this first convention is looked upon with interest especially those of the two opposition parties, which will be the most affected by its success.

Great Interest in Convention.

That it will be a convention that will go down in the annals of political movements in the State of Rhode Island, is borne out by the intense interest that is being manifested in its proceedings.

The entire vote for the candidates for delegates to the State convention is in the hands of the executive committee and is being counted and tabulated. The time for the balloting closed Wednesday evening at midnight and at that time a bigger vote than had been anticipated was in the hands of the committee.

The eight leading candidates of the eighteen who are contesting for the post honors will be chosen to represent the party at Chicago on July 28, and the next eight in order will be selected as alternates.

The decision to select the electors to go on the election ballot makes two contests to be decided at the convention and brings added interest into the outcome.

Consequently the members of the League are looking forward to the convention as the most auspicious one that could be asked for by a newly organized movement.

LAWN PARTY FOR WORKING BOYS' HOME SATURDAY

Ten thousand people are expected to attend the annual lawn party to be held in the interest of the Working Boys' Home on the Cedar street athletic grounds, Newton Centre, to-morrow.

Among the prominent features of the fete will be athletic events, a balloon ascension and thrilling parachute drop by Professor Joseph La Rue, and vaudeville performances afternoon and evening, and dancing.

The grounds will open at 1 o'clock, and the fun will be continuous from that time until 11 p. m.

In the home at Newton Highlands, supported entirely by charity, a large number of boys are taught trades and sent into the world to earn their own livelihood.

The Newton Ladies' Aid Society, which has full charge of the carnival, will be assisted by the recently organized Ladies' Aid Society in Boston and by the various courts of Foresters of Newton and the various divisions and auxiliaries of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Natick, Newton, Waltham and Watertown, and Newton Council No. 70, Knights of Columbus.

Far more enthusiasm and interest has been aroused this year than on any previous occasion. Special arrangements have been made and cars properly designated will run every ten minutes from the subway directly to the grounds.

HELD PENDING FATE OF WIFE

At the same time her husband, John Williams, was locked up in the East Dedham street station charged with assault and battery. He is held awaiting the result of his wife's injuries. A family quarrel led to the wife's injuries, say the police.

Plenty of stores will offer you these low prices at the fag end of the season. Wolf believes in offering them while the summer is still young—and while you still need them.

Our decision to take every summer suit left on hand you will remember is what induced these two manufacturing tailors to accept such tremendous concessions in price—that accounts for the radically low prices. The quality is in each suit or it wouldn't be here—and "Your money back if you want it" safeguards every sale we make.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

GRISWOLD DENIES HE WAS OVERTRAINED

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 26.—Dwight Griswold, the Yale stroke oar, who collapsed yesterday, was much better to-day. He returned from New London with the crew, who enjoyed an informal banquet at the New Haven House after their arrival here by special train.

Griswold was able to walk from the launch to the dressing room in the Yale quarters after the launch steamed from the course to the Yale boathouse, directly following the race. He said: "Fellows, I'm sore and sorry," but the graduates shook his hand and called, "Never mind, old man, cheer up."

In the dressing room Griswold broke down and cried like a child at personal chagrin because he was unable to finish the race.

He has received no ill-effects from his experience. No doctor was called, as it was clear that his collapse was due to his high nervous tension and temperament because of the two accidents which happened to the Yale crew. The first was when at the very start of the race the shoe lace which fastened Captain Ide's foot to the shell broke on the very first stroke. Captain Ide held up his hand, and the referee called back the oarsmen and started the race over.

This had the effect of upsetting Griswold and when the crews got away again it was seen that he was rowing in far from his best form. Before he had gone a half mile it was noted that he was not himself, and at the end of the first mile it was evident that with Griswold unable to hold up the Yale stroke Yale couldn't win.

Stroke Griswold made no excuses to-day for his breakdown in the boat.

"My going to pieces was not a physical defect. It was a nervous breakdown," he said. "I do not blame Coach Kennedy, who had done all any man could have, and I was not overtrained. From the first mile I began to go to pieces, and soon I could hardly catch a breath, and after the second mile I do not remember anything except rowing on and on, like a machine. It seemed ages. I suppose it was only a few minutes after that that I was taken out of the boat."

William H. Meiklejohn of New York city, referee in all the Yale-Harvard races of yesterday, states that he overruled all technicalities when he declined to declare the race yesterday forfeited to Harvard because the Yale coaches talked to the Harvard oarsmen from the Yale launch, and later stopped the Yale shell and started the Yale shell off again to the finish line.

There are rowing rules which say that in case a coach talks to his crew during the race the contest shall be forfeited to the other side. There is also a rule which says that no shell shall stop and receive relief from the launch.

Referee Meiklejohn over-rode these rules deliberately and without fear, and made it possible for Yale to legally finish the race and avoid the stigma of failing to finish the first race in her history.

Mr. Meiklejohn said to a BOSTON AMERICAN representative of his ruling: "The Yale coaches did the correct and humane thing. I cordially approve of it. In fact, I told them so from the referee's boat. Because of the discretionary powers lodged in me as referee, I disregarded all technicalities involved."

HARVARD CREW MAY NOW GO TO ENGLAND

NEW LONDON, June 26.—It is more than likely that the Harvard varsity eight, now that it has defeated Yale, will go to England this Summer and row Cambridge at Putney, over the same course on which Captain Filley's crew was defeated two years ago.

Several months ago it was reported that such a plan was in the air, but the first really definite steps in that direction were taken to-day. Harvard alumni here believe in rewarding the men for the showing that they have made, and the funds necessary for the trip would be speedily forthcoming if the majority of the members decide that they are willing to give up a portion—in fact, practically all—of their Summer for the privilege of taking another crack at the English college men.

One prominent graduate at Red Top declares he stands ready to contribute $1,000 to such a fund, and there are several others who have previously stated that they would do as well by the crew as any other graduate.

Captain Richardson, when asked regarding the present status, said that the crew hadn't done anything, but intimated that they might take action in the course of a few days.

POLICE ATHLETES GET PERMIT FOR OLYMPICS

NEW YORK, June 26.—Martin Sheridan, John J. Flanagan and Matt McGrath, the three police athletes, will sail with the American Olympic team for London to-morrow.

Early to-day Police Commissioner Bingham approved the application made by these men for sixty days' leave of absence.

The news was received with delight by the followers of sport in this city. It was thought by many that the three great athletes would have to remain at home, which would weaken the chances of the American team.

Manager Halpin, when informed of the decision of the commissioner, said that with the exception of Dray, Whitham and Rowe, the full team as selected would sail on the steamer Philadelphia to-morrow morning.

It was announced yesterday that Eddie Carr would compete at the Olympic meet. The Xavier A. A. will pay the expenses of its clever distance runner to London. Carr will leave on a steamer that sails from Boston early next week. Walton, of Boston and Stevens of Yale will sail on the same boat.

The following members of the American team left Chicago for New York yesterday: Holmes, Hebner, Jacobs, Foster, Gadsick and Burroughs. Manager Halpin is turning gray and losing hair over the trouble of the team and attending to the details of the trip. He entertained athletes all day yesterday at the headquarters of the A. A. U., at No. 21 Warren street, and will be a busy man right up to the moment of sailing.

Paul Pilgrim, the handicap king, who unexpectedly captured two events at Athens, was among the callers. He says he is in better shape than he was for the meeting in Greece, and hopes he will be able to get a few points in London.

SYRACUSE IS FAVORITE AT PO'KEEPSIE

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 26.—All is ready for the regatta here to-morrow. Cornell is not expected to win by Coach Courtney.

That Courtney's scepticism in regard to his crew has had a marked influence on the public sentiment was indicated by the betting odds made known this evening, when a bookmaker offered odds of 10 to 1 against Cornell. This betting made Syracuse the favorite at 6 to 5 and the other odds were as follows: Columbia, 3 to 1; Pennsylvania, 4 to 1; Wisconsin, 8 to 1.

Mayor Sague having announced that public pool selling would not be tolerated as in former years there is no place where bets can be publicly posted, but the bookmaker who made the odds quoted circulated quietly among the college men, making a handbook and finding many takers.

This is the first year since 1900 that Cornell has not been favorite, and it seems strange to the townspeople, who have grown so accustomed to Cornell victories that they have grown to expect Courtney's men to win as a matter of course. Those, however, who have followed the Spring races believe Courtney's lack of faith is justified by the fact that the Cornell 'varsity is made up of men from two beaten crews. Five were in the second 'varsity which the three others were in the crew that Pennsylvania's second 'varsity defeated at Ithaca.

Cornellians do not expect to win the four-oared 'varsity either, but they have a mighty good chance of winning that race.

GOV. SANDERS SIGNS BILL.

BATON ROUGE, La., June 26.—Twenty-nine days from to-day the Locke anti-race track gambling bill wil go in effect in Louisiana. Gov. Sanders has attached his signature to the bill.

MARATHON RUN FOR JUVENILES ONE FEATURE

A Marathon run for juveniles will be one of the features of the field day to be held at Locust street to-morrow afternoon, under the direction of the South Boston, Pere Marquette and Robert Fulton councils of the K. of C., in aid of the Columbus day nursery. Chairman Edward L. Hopkins of the athletic committee has completed arrangements for this special event, which is restricted to boys under fifteen years of age.

Many entries have been received and Mr. Hopkins, whose office is at No. 362 West Broadway, South Boston, is anxious to hear from more of the youngsters. The race will be ran over the Strandway, starting from the Head House at City Point, terminating at the Locust street grounds. Many of the kids are in training for the event and can be seen afternoons and evenings speeding along the Strandway.

In addition to the ball game between the Gate of Heaven Holy Name Club and the South Bostons there will be a match between the Elm Hill and Jamaica Plain council teams. There is considerable rivalry among the teams in the K. of C., and this game will settle the matter of supremacy between Elm Hill and Jamaica Plain, which has been in doubt all season.

In the track and field events some of the best known athletes in the country will appear and the officials will include men prominently identified with athletics in the East. "Jack" Moakley, the Cornell trainer, being one of the best known of the officials.

Notes of the Diamond

Whenever a Washington pitcher loses a game Joe Cantillon makes him ride in an upper berth. The Senators' pitching staff last occupied lower berths in the Spring of 1905.

Since selling Roy Thomas to the Pirates the Philadelphia fans are trying to kid themselves that Osborne is just as good a man.

Manager John Ganzel of the Reds, says that right-hand hitters are the thing in the National League now. As Miller Huggins is the only Red who hits left-handed, the standing of the team in the race makes Ganzel's dope look good.

Fred Parent is playing his old game at short-stop for the Sox, but the Boston veteran doesn't seem to recover his batting eye. He is contributing little to the offensive work of the team.

"Pittsburg's Perennial Pennant Pursuing Pirates" is the way a Gotham scribe designates Papa Pitt's National League representatives.

It was learned that Deacon Phillippe is practicing on a spit ball and will use it when he returns to the game, although his right thumb is still quite sore. Phillippe mastered the freak delivery last year, but did not use it much. The success of Chic Fraser with the spit ball this season caused Phillippe to resort to this style of pitching. He should be a winner with it, for in addition to being a student of the game and knowing the weakness of opposing players he usually has splendid control.

Joe Cantillon of Washington will get a prize in Joe Wood next season. Wood is now pitching wonderful ball for Kansas City in the American Association. Last year he was with Hutchinson, Kan.

In Umpire Rudderham's case the experts around the National League circuit refuses to accept a priori argument that an arbitrator is always right. The consensus of opinion is that Rudderham is the worst failure that ever conned Pulliam into paying him a salary; and this is surely a distinction.

American League scorers now have a new trouble to contend with. It is Shaugnessy, Connie Mack's new college outfielder. Doubtless it will soon be reduced to Shaugh.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Allie Nun, 2:22, the most famous trotting horse show mare ever exhibited in this country, is dead.

The former New England trainer and driver, Joe Mooney, is located at Montgomery, Ala., and among the horses in his stable is the pacing mare Lillie Pointer, 2:12½, that has been a mile in 2:10 this season.

Major Muscovite, 2:07, that once held the race record over the Saugus track, is in training again for racing over the two-lapped tracks. He is still the property of Eugene Sullivan of Chicago.

It is regarded as doubtful whether the grandstand at the Glenville track, Cleveland, can be moved intact to the new race track in Randall, as has been thought.

William Carlson of Forestville, Ct., thought he was having the star nightmare of his life the other night when he came out of a sound sleep and saw a horse at the head of his bed. However, it proved a realty, as the animal was one owned by a neighbor that had got out of his stall and walked up a flight of stairs into Carlson's room.

The proposed three-cornered match race between the Lynn trotters Rose Mack, 2:18¾, Crosus, 2:19¼, and The Sailorman, 2:20¼, for $100 a corner, is off.

Harvey Clapp of Attleboro reports that his stable of six in training by Frank Hayden at Lewiston, Me., are in the pink of shape, and may take the word at the coming Montreal meeting.

Trainer Fred Clark of Providence certainly had no bother in getting his campaigning string ready for early racing, as in the meeting at Baltimore he is getting no more than his share of the money.

That Lady Dreamer filly will have no trouble in getting into select society whenever the question is put to her, professional or amateur racing. The nice way in which she marched off the heat at Charles River Speedway in 1:02½ shows what a wonderfully improved filly she is from last season.

Katina, the trotting mare that is doing so well in the matinees at South Weymouth, was owned last year by W. J. Bates of Dorchester, who sold her to George A. French, her present owner. She can beat 2:20 quite a distance right now over a track like Readville.

SHRUBB AT SCOTS' GAMES.

Alfred Shrubb, the world's champion long-distance runner, will spend the Summer in Boston and will compete in various events in this vicinity. He will be among the competitors at the Scotch picnic at West Roxbury on August 8, in the distance runs. Come Miles for Pianos

Because people can save their carfare many times over—Their local agent of some special piano cannot possibly sell at a price anywhere near as low as ours—If his piano is made by the Trust he will have to charge a Trust Price for it—and any one knows what that means—We have cut prices on pianos so low that it would be horribly extravagant to give your local dealer anywhere near his asking price for his instrument—No matter what make—The chances are that the difference between his price and ours would pay your fare to Boston and give you a good day besides—Inspect your Intelligence and Purse and Buy from Us—We give a legal guarantee.

A Broken-Backed Snake Is Public Gambling

Snakes with Their Backs Broken Don't Live Long

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

The experienced country boy, when he sees that he has broken the snake's back, is contented. There is no use wasting time stamping on its head. That snake won't go anywhere, and he won't live long. Country boys have a superstition that the broken-backed snake lives until the sun goes down. Perhaps it does.

There is a big city snake called public race track gambling. He is like his smaller country brother, and it is pleasing to announce that his back is thoroughly broken in New York. He is still wiggling feebly, but there is no necessity for stamping on his head very hard—HE WON'T LIVE.

He may possibly struggle along until the end of the season, as the snake is said to struggle on until the end of day. The men that have been "enjoying their sport" and raking in the profits from stolen money are going through certain motions which they call "living up to gentlemen's agreements." They will keep the racing more or less alive, but they will soon shut it up, and shut up their pocketbooks, you may be sure, now that the money is going OUT of those pocketbooks instead of coming in.

There is a little talk about betting on credit—"gentlemen giving each other their word without putting up any money." But that is only the last feeble wiggle of the tip end of the snake's tail.

Betting upon credit won't do any harm, and it won't amount to much. Gamblers are not fools, THEY KNOW TOO MUCH TO TRUST EACH OTHER. The amount of betting that is done on credit at the race tracks is of no importance at all.

Bookmakers won't continue to bleed the clerks that rob their employers, and the bookmakers won't be able to hand any profit over to the "gentlemen" at the top. Working men, clerks, and small people are not betting "on credit." They are staying at home, or going to see the baseball game, or otherwise using their time and their brains better than they used either at the ruinous gambling game.

The New York gambling snake is broken-backed and dying. The fields that he has occupied for years will be cut up into building lots. Homes for decent, good men will cover the indecent gambling ring. ONE GOOD THING IS DONE.

If a Baby Amused Himself Chewing the Paint Off a Locomotive Wheel

He Would Be Like Poor Little Alfred Vanderbilt and Some Others

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Alfred Vanderbilt is "coming home," ladies and gentlemen. He has given up his grand coaching enterprise in England. Some of his horses are coming back with him. We learn that "his best grays and a number of other horses will come back here. The others, to the number of about sixty, will be sold at Tattersall's on June 29." Hurry over, if you want the honor of buying a horse that pulled the beautiful coach Venture while all the world wondered.

Don't suppose we want to criticise little Mr. Vanderbilt or say unpleasant things to him, or about him. Not for a minute. We have seen many a squirrel dashing madly around in his little wheel. We have felt sorry to see his energy wasted, wished that he might be stuffing nuts into his little fat cheeks, or jumping from tree to tree. We have never been tempted to pull his tail or call him a foolish squirrel.

There is no temptation to be unkind in the case of the other little squirrels—hereditary little American millionaires—dashing around in their little squirrel cages—helpless, busy doing nothing.

Young Alfred Vanderbilt inherited a very great fortune—close to a hundred millions, probably. He can do anything that he wants to do, BUT THE TROUBLE IS THAT HE DOESN'T WANT TO DO ANYTHING EXCEPT DRIVE AND SIT ABOUT AND WONDER WHAT IT IS ALL FOR.

Think of a boy inheriting a great railroad system, having in his hands a power to benefit tens of thousands of workmen, AND MILLIONS OF CITIZENS. Think of a young man who could, IF HE HAD IT IN HIM, add to and direct the prosperity of a nation. Then think of the poor child going over to England to drive "favorite gray horses," and try to get excitement out of that.

It is as though somebody had left a powerful railroad locomotive to a three-year-old baby, and the baby, not knowing what to do with it, had tried to chew the paint off the driving wheels. You would feel sorry for the baby and sorry for the engine.

That is how you feel sorry for the poor little Vanderbilt babies, big and little, and the other babies of the same type. They see in the great power that is left to them nothing but the paint and the show. They chew that off as long as they can and then die disgusted.

Poor creatures, with wasted lives and opportunities. You need not envy them.

But you might, as intelligent voters, SEE TO IT THAT RAILROADS AND OTHER MATTERS VITALLY IMPORTANT TO YOU ARE MANAGED FOR YOU, and all that without in the least interfering with the happiness of gentlemen that want to drive coaches.

Are We Like Children?

By Winifred Black

THE elm trees were in full feather.

The slender catalpa waved its broad leaves till it looked as if some one was clapping hands, and the cinnamon rose bush in the corner of the garden was all alight with pink blossoms.

The grass was so green that it looked like the grass in an impressionist picture of Ireland, and all the little pink and white daisies along the edge of the garden walk nodded their funny little heads and looked as if they were laughing.

Three children were playing under the elm trees. Three little girls, two of them with long, slim, black-stockinged legs, and bobbed hair, and one of them, short-socked, bare-legged, curly-headed and chubby. They had a puppy and a hammock, and there were three dolls in the party. I looked out of my window and saw them.

I'm tired of grown-ups, I said, and of grown-up worries, and troubles, and quarrels, and woes.

I'm going out into the green garden, and sit by the cinnamon rose bush and listen to the children play.

So I went out of the dark, quiet, gloomy house into the gay, green garden, and the puppy barked and the children laughed when they saw me coming, and I sat down by the cinnamon rose bush and prepared to enjoy life.

The shadow of the leaves flickered on the green grass, a vagrant little breeze stirred the great leaves of the catalpa trees, and the scarlet poppies at the back wall lifted their drowsy heads in a kind of undulating, sleepy welcome.

"How different it is out here," I said to myself. "How foolish I was to stay in the dull house so long." But hark! something was happening in the hammock, something unpleasant.

"She's fainted," said one of the girls with bobbed hair. "Run for the doctor!" cried the other little girl with the bobbed hair.

And the chubby little girl with the short socks and the curly hair leaned back and shut her eyes and tried her best to look as ill and wretched as she could.

And all that beautiful sunny June afternoon those children stayed in the gay little garden and played—that they were very, very ill, and very unhappy, and sometimes one of them died, and was buried, and then the other two cried and moaned as if their hearts were breaking—and the gay little garden was turned into a court of mourning.

All because three little girls chose to make it so.

I wonder how many of us grown-ups are like the three little girls who played sick room and trained nurse and funeral when they might have been playing fairies and gypsies and gnomes.

With the whole wide world of fancy to pick and choose from, they chose a sick room and an invalid for company.

I wonder if there are not a good many of us who do the same thing every day!

NEVER AGAIN!

Will You Pay the Price?

Think What It's Going to Cost Before Deciding on What to Do with Your Life

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

YOU AND TO-DAY

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

WITH every rising of the sun
Think of your life as just begun.
The past has shrived and buried deep
All yesterdays—there let them sleep
Nor seek to summon back one ghost
Of that innumerable host.
Concern yourself but with to-day.
Woo it and teach it to obey
Your wish and will. Since time began
To-day has been the friend of man,
But in his blindness and his sorrow
He looks to yesterday and to-morrow.
You and to-day, a soul sublime,
And the great, pregnant hour of time,
With God between to bind the twain,
Go forth, I say. Attain! Attain!

YOU want to be healthy and strong, of course, and to keep young.

But are you willing to pay the price?

The price is temperate living, carefulness in diet (neither fasting nor feasting), avoidance of stimulants and drugs, enough exercise each day to open the pores, enough sleep each night to refresh the body and mind, control of the passions, optimistic thoughts, cleanliness, correct breathing (deep breathing, which uses the whole lung capacity) and proper attitudes of the body.

Persistently carried out, every hour of every day, these simple rules mean absolute health for the young and restoration to health for the mature.

But are you willing to pay the price?

Of course, it means continual self-denial.

Rich food, many stimulating beverages, late hours and idleness are all enjoyable for a time; for a time they do not seem to interfere with the health, but eventually they destroy it. Will you pay the price and be well?

Success Has Its Price

YOU want to be successful.

But that, too, costs. You can pay on the instalment plan, but it will keep you busy. Concentration is the first payment. It is a word much used, but little understood. It means drawing all your mental forces to one centre and keeping them there when you have any goal in mind.

It means quiet, persistent, unswerving devotion to your purpose; continual application and absolute belief in your ultimate success.

It means finding your own balance and maintaining it through all sorts of discouragements and overcoming every obstacle by your own personal endeavor.

It means rising up and going on after each downfall, and going back and beginning over after each mistake, cheerfully and hopefully.

That brings success after many years. Are you willing to pay the price?

Price of an Affinity

PERHAPS you are filled with a mad passion for some man or woman one who is not free to belong to you.

Perhaps you say you are willing to give up the world for that person.

But are you?

After you pay the price will you not go whining about and calling the world cold and cruel that it does not accept you and your common-law mate?

Will you not tire of your associate after the fever abates and want still another? Can you be satisfied to live on to the end of life with this companion and continually pay the price?

Price of a Happy Home

YOU want a good woman's love and companionship through life in a happy home.

Will you pay the price?

A good woman is worth a man's continual attention; she is worth a man's loyalty and love; she is worth entertaining; her faults and weaknesses must be patiently borne with, and he must learn how to help her correct them by correcting his own.

A satisfactory home must be built from within.

To buy brick and stone and furniture and marry a good woman for love does not insure a happy life by any means.

The price is an eternal effort of each inmate to be worth while, to be unselfish, to be reasonable, to be sensible, to be kind in the little things of life.

Are you willing to pay the price?

Price of Getting Rich

PERHAPS you want great riches.

You can have them by becoming a grafter, a miser, a schemer and by shutting away all sympathy, kindness and humanity from your heart.

You can acquire wealth enough by such means to make you hated and despised by all right-minded people and to make you sought after by the brainless spongers of earth, who will want to receive money favors at your hands.

Are you willing to pay the price?

It may be that you want to grow mentally and spiritually and to make yourself the very best specimen of your race possible in your stage of development.

You can do it if you are willing to pay the price.

The price is concentration, self-control and faith.

A half hour each day given to communion with your best self, and with the Invisible Friends who are ever waiting to strengthen those who seek the heights; a constant aspiration to grow in usefulness and wisdom, a patient weeding out of all that is selfish and pretty and a thorough mastering of the laws of mind.

Are you willing to pay the price?

The Po-ta-to has all the shrink-ing mod-es-ty of the Vi-o-let, with a sterling worth of its own. When prop-erly boiled in its jack-et it has the figure and smile of Big Bill Taft.

To the Po-ta-to the world owes Brian Bo-ru, Pat-rick Sars-field, Wolfe Tone, Tom Moore and Mart-in Sher-i-dan.

With-out the Po-ta-to what would we do for Po-ta-to fair-s? Ech-o answers what. With-out the Po-ta-to what would cri-t-ics throw at suffrag-ettes? No reply is pos-si-ble.
